HAROLD JACOBS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, Sept. 27.—The American people, themselves individually and through corporations, are bringing about the present price reduction through a determination to do without pleasure and business luxuries, according to James B. Clews, managing partner of Henry Clews & Co.
In other words the country is undergoing a "sudden attack of common sense," Clews said today.
The banker added that a contributing factor in bringing about return to normal conditions is a determined attitude of the federal reserve authorities with regard to deflation of credits which were becoming not only dangerous but a burden to the country.

Although it had been generally known that Zimmerman, Chase and Magee were banished because of alleged crookedness, this was the first official announcement of the act.

COX STUMPING BRYAN'S HOME STATE

HERBERT WALKER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Enroute With Governor Cox, North Platte, Neb., Sept. 27.—Governor Jas. M. Cox, following a bitter denunciation at Cheyenne of Wayne B. Miller, counsel for the anti-saloon league, today began his stump invasion of Nebraska, the home state of Wm. Jennings Bryan.

He was scheduled to make nine speeches. Interest centered on attacks he would make in referring to the position of Bryan in the convention. His league speeches were to be made at Lincoln, Bryan's home town.

In his attack on Miller, Cox claimed the anti-saloon league counsel was a "mere chattel of the republican headquarters."

Referring to the statement of Senator Harding's secretary that the republican candidate still owns some Marion brewery stock which he purchased several years ago, Cox said "How can Mr. Miller explain to conscientious members of his organization his support for the president of the United States of a brewer who is apologizing for his holdings?"

Multiplying the Wheat Yield 21 Times Per Man

"It takes thirteen minutes of human labor to produce every bushel of wheat that comes out of a good American wheat state. In Europe a bushel of wheat required four and one-half hours of labor."
—Dearborn Independent.

Europe with its pre-war wealth of labor developed intensive hand cultivation to an extent undreamed of because unnecessary in America. In the United States labor shortage developed a type of farming which gave petroleum products a chance to lend a hand.

Increased labor-shortage in the United States has meant increased application of gasoline-power to the farms of the Middle West. Mechanical power has multiplied the wheat yield 21 times per man.

The fact that power machinery, and gasoline to run it, is going on the farms, is responsible in no small degree for the large crops produced for 1920. The great mission of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is to produce enough gasoline to supply the farmer with all he can use at the time and place he needs it, and at a low price.

"Domestic consumption of gasoline, far outstripping our production of crude petroleum, has forced gasoline up in price. During the first four months of 1920, gasoline consumption increased 796,030 gallons a day more than production during the same period." (Oil News, July 5, 1920.) While more crude oil is being produced in 1920 than even the most enthusiastic optimist dared predict five years ago, it is not sufficient to meet the ever increasing demand.

Every facility developed by the vast organization of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) through years of service, is being directed to the end of supplying the farms of the Middle West with necessary petroleum products. Transportation difficulties have been anticipated by this company, so that there has been no serious shortage of petroleum products to the farmer in any of the states served by this company—the dark green tank wagon delivering even to the tractor in the field in emergencies.

Helping the farmer produce and market his crop is one of the essential services rendered by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to the people of the Middle West.

THINGS FOR THE WAISTLINE

Belts, Sash, Girdle or Collection of Furbelows Carry Any Dress Into Fashion.

The Gotham fashion world has announced that although a string of beads and a cheshire smirk will not suffice for a midsummer costume, all a dress needs in order to be a dress is a belt, a sash, a girdle or a collection of furbelows above, at and below the waistline, writes a New York fashion correspondent. Dame Fashion has resurrected any type of dress and put her stamp of approval upon it by hurling some kind of a waistline trinket thereon, and chicness is the up-to-date minute result.

Both Orient and Occident have hobbled in this new folderol of the erratic old dame, although the East is supposed to be directly responsible for this hobbling of the hips. Rich silk fringes in every shade of the rainbow are showered over gowns of sheerness or heaviness, according to the manner of the Spanish dancing girl. Fringe arrangement a la Cleopatra is also much in the limelight and this fad promises a revival of the good old-time vamps and serpents of the Nile.

Recently a prominent actress dined at the Ritz clad in a very slinky, modish Paris gown, about the middle part of which was draped a colorful sash of many ribbons, slashed into dozens of loops that fell to the floor and formed into a train. "Movie" studios are demanding trains on evening gowns, and it looks as if an unhappy day was coming for perambulating feet.

Smart Fifth avenue shops are making frocks of barren simplicity and then embellishing them with some confection of sash or belt worth a king's ransom. Up in upper Fifth avenue a shop shows a plain silk dress of perfectly straight lines which flaunts a wedgewood buckle at the belt. With the belt it may possibly be had for a four figure price. It is no secret that several museums tried to obtain this piece of former pottery for their collections, but failed because of the higher bid of the ladies' apparel house which coveted the wedgewood.

All street dresses display the use of colored leather for belts, and the most popular fad is a combination of several weights and colors of leathers. Tan with white bound in black is very popular upon linens and serge. The Grecian girdles made of colored chenille cords abound on light silk gowns, while the bouffant is supplied by hip puffings made of knotted cords or fringes.

GEORGETTE FOR COOL FROCK

Material Affords More or Less Dressy Fabric Which Is Favorite for Late Summer.

Brown has made quite a place for itself this season, and bisque dots and trimmings are often used by way of decoration. Foulard, satins and materials on this order are all very well for early summer, but in the "dog days" they cannot approach the coolness of sheer cottons. If a more or less "dressy" fabric is required for a town dress, georgette makes the coolest frock of this sort.

There is one pale shade which is favored in all materials and for all occasions—French gray. This color has been extremely popular in Paris for many months, but it was not till warm weather reached us that we gave it anything like its Parisian reception. Fashion does not always regard matters of heat in choosing her favorite colors, however, for tomato red is new and very popular in organdie and wispe, yet, needless to say, it is not exactly cooling in effect. The transparent hats that are being worn do much to aid a cool appearance. In lace, tulle or horse hair braid they are frequently seen and quite as often they are of organdie, wispe or georgette.

Debutantes and Delegates. Personally we are strong for woman suffrage, but we still love the kind of girl who would rather be a debutante than a delegate.—Dallas News.

PATHE NEWS

Hearty Welcome Given to Actuelle Records—Instantaneous Success of Needle Cuts—Two Million More Customers Available

From coast to coast comes the pleasing word that Actuelle Records have filled a long felt want among dealers and their customers who wanted to enjoy needle cut records with the Pathe tone, made by favorite Pathe artists upon their steel needle talking machines.

The arrival of the Actuelle records furnished Pathe dealers with more than two million immediately available customers and the number of telegraphic repeat and enlarged orders from every part of the country proves that many owners of the "half a-phonograph" which only play one kind of records, were not slow to take advantage of the new Actuelle records.

The advent of the Actuelle records accomplished at least two very important things: It made it possible for the public to enjoy Pathe artists on steel machines and over night it made a "record prospect" for Pathe dealers of every owner of any kind of a phonograph in the world.

LOST POPULATION

Census returns on Little Falls show a 578 loss or 9.5 per cent decrease over the 1910 figures. Brainerd, on the other hand, increased 12.5 per cent.

Little Falls' population today is officially given out as 5,500 and Brainerd has 9,591.

In explanation of the discouraging figures, the Little Falls Transcript says:

"With least 200 more homes and flats in Little Falls than 10 years ago and every one filled to capacity, the census returns give Little Falls a decrease. It is very evident that the census is not complete and local people should demand a recount."

MORO A DANGEROUS FANATIC

Believes Eternal Bliss to Be His if He Meets Death While Killing Christians.

The psychology of Mohammedanism is incomprehensible to persons reared in the atmosphere and teachings of American Christianity. With us the separation of church and state is as much a matter of course as the air we breathe. With us suicide is immoral and the killing of an unbeliever is a crime punishable with death. The Mohammedan has no conception of ecclesiastical and state law. There is only one law, the Koran; and while in fact the priest and the ruler may be different persons, they are different only in a functional way, like a judge and an executive in our government. The spiritual ruler is also temporal ruler, as was Mohammed in his day. The killing of Christians is a virtue that merits everlasting bliss in paradise. The martyrs of the early Christian church burned with no more consuming ardor than the humble, ignorant Mohammedan peasants who swear before the priest that they will go forth and devote their lives to killing Christians. Mohammedans who have sworn to kill Christians are called in the Philippines juramentados, from the Spanish, meaning one who has sworn or taken an oath. Up to a decade ago it was no uncommon occurrence in Jolo for a Moro fanatic to conceal his bolo knife, or kris, in a basket of fruit until he had passed the guard at the gate of the walled town, then draw his blade and cut right and left, killing man, woman or child, with perfect impartiality, until a bullet from the guard stopped his advance. It was this indomitable will to kill that gave the Christian Filipino his mortal fear of the Moro in times past.—O. Garfield Jones, in Asia.

Velocity of Light.

Physicists never tire of efforts to increase the accuracy of their knowledge of the fundamental facts of science. A redetermination of the velocity of light by the Fizeau toothed wheel method was made at Nice. These experiments were remarkable on account of the great distance over which the beam of light employed was transmitted. Previously such a beam had been caused to travel about fifteen miles, but on this occasion the reflecting mirror was so placed that the total distance traversed by the beam, going and returning, was fifty-seven miles. The mean of 1109 observations gave for the velocity of light 186,225 1/2 miles a second.

Immunity From Whooping Cough.

Dr. T. Luzzati of Rome was called to three different houses, in each of which a child had begun to cough. In each case he suspected that it might be whooping cough; therefore, as a precaution, he vaccinated all the brothers and sisters with an anti-whooping-serum. Ten days later his suspicion was confirmed by the typical whoop, but in no case did one of the other children catch the disease, though no attempt at isolation was made.

In reporting this to Policlinics (Rome) Doctor Luzzati says he has found no benefit from vaccination once the disease has become pronounced.

A DAY WITH SENATOR HARDING

Calm, Steady, Determined, the American Who Is Leading the Republican Party to Victory Goes About the Business of the Campaign in His Modest Office in Marion.

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

The American people will decide, of course. If they can visualize the vital principle which is at stake—the spirit which is at once the keynote and the mainspring of the campaign upon which the nation has entered, there can be no doubt of the result.

It isn't a thing that can be carried about the country, and exhibited from the rear end of a Pullman car. It is wholly apart from the red fire, blaring bands and stump oratory of old-fashioned campaigns. The issue, in short, goes deep down to that principle which has been the mainspring of the national life since the days of Lexington and Concord; and the patriotic citizen, Republican and Democrat alike, by taking counsel with himself, will find it imbedded in his own heart.

Here in Marion, O., you get a concrete exposition of that vital principle. It is good to come to Marion and get the true perspective. You are brought anew, here, to the realization that the country is in process of electing a chief executive to guide the destinies of 120,000,000 people for the four years ensuing from March 4 next; that the very serious business of bringing about what a European observer described as "a revolution by due process of law," is going forward with a proper regard for the dignity and importance of the task.

Scene Entirely Appropriate.

Your first impression is of the fitness of Marion as the scene for the enactment of such a chapter in American history. It is a quiet little country town, for all its boasted industrial activity; and when you approach the Harding residence, one among many in its simplicity and attractiveness, you feel it is quite in keeping with events that from this typical American home there should come a modest, dignified and capable, up-standing American upon whom the choice of his fellow citizens should fall to uphold the honor and traditions of the nation. This conviction grows when you meet the man. He is typical of the successful business man—of the hundreds of thousands of successful Americans who have accumulated a competence through the ordinary channels which are open to all hard working, straightforward American boys.

Meet him, now. He has established an office in the home of George Christian, Jr., his secretary, which adjoins the Harding house—and this is typical; chief and secretary live side by side, each owning his own modest home. And by the way, these executive officers are illuminating as to the kind of a man it is whom the Republican party has made its standard bearer in this epoch-making campaign. Every room in the house is given over to the business in hand—the senator's conference room is the Christian dining room, his private office, where the important conferences are held, is the kitchen. In the living room sits Christian. Elsewhere, from cellar to garret, the staff are at work. No confusion, no disorder, no hectic shouting at the top of one's voice, no running around in circles, pounding of the table, no harrying, jimmying or bullying, with strident denunciations of the other side, and loud boastsings of the way the opposition candidate is to be beaten into a pulp. Just a thorough, careful, business-like transaction of the business in hand—precisely the way in which we like to think the work of 120,000,000 people will be conducted at the White House after March 4.

Step into the dining room and meet the senator. Just at the minute he is reading proof on editorials which are to be printed in his newspaper, the Marion "Star." In the afternoon, the senator stands for everything that is printed in the "Star," and is careful to read what goes into its columns before the paper goes to press. Disposing of the proof sheet, he shakes hands cordially with you, and you are at liberty to size him up.

Mark Him Dependable.

He is somewhat above the average, of course, because he has already been singled out by the people of Ohio to represent them in the senate. But aside from this: You are at once struck by his balance and his poise. You mark him as dependable—safe. There is that in his face, on his brow, which gives assurance that he is not the sort of a man who will speak without thinking, or act without deliberating. There is reserve force in his bearing, determination in his jaws, character in his mouth, kindly sympathy in his eyes.

As you listen to him talk here in the Christian dining room, or later, in a speech to a visiting delegation from the front porch of his home, this conviction is strengthened. He doesn't say anything in his office that he wouldn't say out on the porch, nor anything on the porch that he wouldn't adhere to in all sincerity in his office.

The thing that strikes you at all times—it is the very atmosphere of Marion—is his moderation, his restraint—the absence of all bombast and exaggeration in his statements, the careful presentation of the issues, the avoidance of all attempt to array one class against the other, the conveyance of the desire, if called to the presidency, to be president of all the people; and, without making any high-sounding promises, to give all of the people the best that is in him.

Avoids Personal Controversy.

Particularly noticeable is his avoidance of personal controversy. Not once since his nomination has Harding referred in a public speech to his opponent. He adheres to the issues. Not once has he permitted himself to indulge in personal denunciation of his rival.

He is sane. He has fixed convictions as to the moderation and balance which should characterize candidates for the high office of the presidency; departure from which he believes, without doing any good to the candidate who offends, does serve to bring American institutions into contempt.

During the war there was a Harding-kind of man in service as bo'sun on an American merchantman. The time came when the ship was torpedoed; and the bo'sun was put in charge of the tiller on the whaleboat in which a goodly portion of the crew took refuge. A storm arose, and there was imminent danger that the boat would be swamped. In the stern sheets sat the bo'sun, rigid and erect, his hand locked to the tiller. He said little—"Steady!" now and then to the rowers; or "hold fast; take her head on!" as the boat rose on the crest of a giant wave, and then plunged straight down into the trough of the sea. But for twenty-three hours straight-away, he held fast to the tiller, and he didn't relinquish it until he had guided the boat hard and fast on a friendly beach.

Then he got up and stretched and asked for a pipe of tobacco.

Calm, steady, determined and knowing his business, one conceives of the other Harding thus guiding the ship through any storm that may arise, to a safe harbor.

Even with his adeptness at locating these misaligned or subluxated vertebrae he is sometimes baffled; and to prove conclusively to himself that he is absolutely correct in his findings, he resorts to the X-ray. By taking a radiographic picture of the patient's spine, he is not only enabled to actually see the exact conditions as they exist, but he is also able to show the patient that condition.

At the New Park Next Sunday

"The Girl in the Limousine," which comes to the Park theatre Sunday, Oct. 3, proves to be a man, and a burglar at that. But other girls, thin ones, plump ones, all pretty ones, were mostly to be found in one bedroom. The room belonged to a perfectly nice man and wife, but the effect it gave was that of a hotel lobby. Really people simply poured through that bedroom—no privacy, no quietude, but much hubbalooboo. Betty, the wife of Freddie, is discovered asleep, and slightly ill, oh, very slightly, with grippe. Two clever burglars, who in their thorough raiding remind one of the H. C. of L., bring their most recent victim unconscious into Betty's room and deposit him on the floor and then proceed to divest him of everything except his B. V. D's. One thief really has too much heart to allow those to be taken, altho they are both tempted. The difficulties, the embarrassments, the complications which arise from this situation, left by the aforementioned burglars, make all the havoc which follows in three acts. Innocent wives, cherished sweethearts, irreproachable butlers, officious aunts and everything suffer terribly and have to be extricated, but only after the audience has had a joyous time laughing at the wholesale discomfort and with some real comedians. Mr. Woods' new farce is the work of Wilson Collison and Avery Hopwood and is a successor to "Up in Mabel's Room" and "Fair and Warmer."

After leaving Toronto Dec. 3 last year, he and his secretary, J. Dougherty, have not been seen since. Small had $100,000 in Canadian war bonds in his possession when he vanished. He is estimated to be worth $12,000,000.

Experiments have been carried out in Burma with the idea of utilizing the silica content of paddy, rice husks, in the manufacture of glass. On burning the husks about 13 per cent of white ash is obtained, and, although this ash contains small quantities of iron, it has been proved to be suitable for the manufacture of glass having a pale green or yellow color. In burning the husks sufficient heat is generated to carry out the various processes.

WARSAW: THE PARIS OF POLAND

No other people, in all the world's history, has borne oppression so bravely and gloriously as the Poles, except the Jews; and Warsaw, where the "Russians had to keep a garrison of 200,000 troops to overawe a city of 900,000 people," is to Poland what Paris is to France.

Indeed the vivacity, the gaiety and the quick wit of Warsaw's people are a constant reminder of Paris; as well as these deeper likenesses which spring from Warsaw's ascendancy in the letters, the arts and the social graces.

All this, too, in a city where the most gruesome tragedies have stalked. As recently as the years of our own Civil war the Russian army moved down thousands of men and women as they knelt in the snow, singing their national anthem. Deportations are an old story in Warsaw, every effort at nationalization was followed by slaughter, and hundreds marched the long trail to Siberian exile.

But Poland's spirit meanwhile, became a synonym for the indomitable. The success of the Russification of Poland has been described as the process of keeping 12,000,000 Poles pinned to Russia by bayonets. Politically nonexistent, for even Poland's name was expunged from all official Russian records, the pre-war Warsaw vied with world capitals in science, particularly medicine, in manufacturing, in trade and in literature.

Though Warsaw betrayed none of the grimness characteristic of Russian cities, reminders of her by-gone glories and tragedies were to be found even before the World war restored her autonomy.

In the Lazienki gardens is a monument to John Sobieski, who stemmed the advance of the Turks in Europe, a figure as picturesque as Paderewski who now sees his land a barrier to bolshevism's westward spread. It was in 1683 that a Turkish force had thrown itself in crescent formation around Vienna. The encampment was no less threatening because it resembled a circus rather than a siege, with its herds of camels, and luxurious tents with baths and parrots within and fountains without.

Mighty events often hinge on slender circumstances. Sobieski hesitated because Leopold, Austria's emperor, first declined to address him as "Your Majesty." But Sobieski's hesitation is said to have vanished when he learned that the French ambassador had written to Louis XIV., who rather hoped for the worst for Austria. "Don't trouble yourself, Sobieski is too fat to sit on a horse and fight." The "fat man" rode his charger into the thick of the fight, helping him his way to where the Turkish grand vizier stood, and after the battle handed one of that dignitary's stirrups to an aide, with the command, "Take it to the queen and tell her that he to whom it belonged is defeated and slain."

One of the principal Siberian cities is Tobolsk, the commercial center of the vast province of Tobolsk, which extends over an area of 500,000 square miles, a large portion of which, however, is practically uninhabited. The most prominent building in the city is the Kremlin, built in imitation of the great citadel in Moscow. This structure was erected by Swedish prisoners of war captured by Peter the Great at the battle of Poltava in 1709.

NATIONAL RETAIL CLOTHIERS MEET

O. A. Peterson of Bye & Peterson Attended the Convention Held in Chicago

PEAK HIGH PRICES REACHED

Statistics Presented on Cost of Doing Business, as Gained from Survey of 276 Stores

O. A. Peterson of Bye & Peterson, one of our leading clothiers, returned home yesterday from a visit to Chicago where he attended the National Retail Clothiers convention. He was one of more than one thousand delegates to attend the meeting of the organization which has a membership of over six thousand of the most progressive retail clothing merchants in the United States, embracing every state in the union. More than 75% of the retail clothing business is done by the members of this organization.

Mr. Peterson brings good news to the wearer of clothes. After listening to clothing manufacturers in the principal markets in the United States who attended the convention, he is of the opinion that the "peak of high prices" has been reached.

"One of the most interesting events of the convention," he said, "was the statistics brought out by Professor Horace E. Secrist, head of the Department of Business Research of the Northwestern University, developing the fact that members of this Association were operating on the lowest margin of profit ever reported in the history of the clothing business. He indicated that the clothier wanted to do his part in bringing conditions back to a normal basis."

Professor Secrist showed by survey of 276 merchants, distributed in all parts of the United States and doing a business of over $28,000,000 a year, that the retail merchant pays $70.00 for every one hundred dollars worth of clothing sold and that it costs $22.70 to sell it, leaving a profit of only $7.30 on each $100 transaction, or a little over 7 per cent. Out of this $7.30 the merchant must pay the Income, Excess Profit and all other taxes.

"Every member in that convention," Mr. Peterson declared, "was working for the stabilization of prices and to obtain lower costs for merchandise from the manufacturers. It is gratifying to report that the manufacturers were all willing and anxious to aid in price reduction. The entire labors of the convention were bent to this cause and the retailers agreed to do what they could to accomplish this purpose."

They urged that merchandise be sold at the smallest profit margin possible.

Mr. Peterson, although very busy during the convention had time enough to devote a portion of his visit to pleasure. The delegates were entertained by The Associated Salesmen of Chicago during their four days visit. He was a guest at a big banquet and vaudeville entertainment at the famous Marigold Gardens, where the members of the convention were addressed by former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, the democratic candidate for governor, and the Honorable Fred Landis of Indiana, a brother of Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the federal judge who fined the Standard Oil Company $29,000,000. The delegates also visited

FIRST AID FOR PREVENTING WAR

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE SO CONSIDERED BY THOSE WHO FAVOR IT.

IS THE PLAN OF ELIHU ROOT

Opposed by Americans Who Object to the League of Nations, Because It Is Part of the League's Machinery.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington.—The formation of a court of international justice will complete the processes provided by the covenant of the League of Nations for preventing war. These processes are: (1) Through diplomacy. (2) By means of arbitration; that is to say, submission of the controversy to the court of international justice. (3) Through the council of the League of Nations, which may, if it desires, refer the controversy to the assembly of the league.

Leading opponents of the League of Nations in the United States say they are opposed to the court of international justice on the ground that it is to be a part of the machinery of the League of Nations. The United States, not being a member of the league, will not have anything to say about whether the plan for the court shall be approved or not. This of itself is an interesting circumstance in view of the fact that the court is to a large extent the product of the mind of an American, former Secretary of State Root. International lawyers look upon the court of international justice as a "first aid" in the general scheme of the League of Nations covenant for preventing war. The initial effort to settle controversies between nations is, of course, always made through diplomatic channels. The diplomatic exchanges of July, 1914, are a good illustration of an attempt to prevent war through this method, and of the failure of the method.

Resort to War Delayed, at Least.

Under article 12 of the league covenant, members of the league, in case there should arise between them any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, may submit the matter either to the court of international justice (providing the court would have jurisdiction) or to inquiry by the council of the league. No matter whether the dispute shall be submitted to the court or to the council, the parties to the dispute agree that in no case will they resort to war until three months after the award of the court of the report of the council. This provision of the league covenant is looked upon as the surest preventive of war provided by the covenant. There would be months of delay while the dispute was being presented to the court of international justice or to the council, and then after the court or the council had made its decision the parties to the dispute would be bound to keep the peace for three additional months. The theory of this provision is that after waiting so long a time the war fever would wear off.

If such a League of Nations as now exists had been in operation in July, 1914, the issues which led to that war, following the failure by diplomacy to maintain peace, would have been submitted to the court of international justice or to the council of the league. In either case there would have resulted a delay of from six to nine months. At the end of that time Germany, which was the aggressor, would have accepted the decision of the court, or the decision of the council, in case the issues had gone to the assembly, or would have become an outlaw nation.

Its Bearing on Article Ten.

International lawyers say that the Root court of international justice will have an important bearing on article 10 of the league covenant. This is the article which provides that the members of the league shall undertake to "respect and preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league." The article further provides that "in case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the council shall advise upon the means by which the obligation shall be fulfilled."

It is pointed out that the court of international justice would have jurisdiction over questions relating to territorial integrity and that the council would undoubtedly advise that, as a first step, such controversies be referred to the court.

The plan for the court of international justice drawn up by the committee of jurists which recently finished a session of two months at The Hague has been sent to the 39 members of the league. The question of approving the plan will come up at the first meeting of the league members in Geneva in November. The information from abroad indicates that there is but little opposition to the court plan, and it is believed it will be almost unanimously approved.

A Small-Sized One.

"Were you ever worried by the size of your campaign fund?"

"Only once," said Senator Sorghum. "I'll never forget the time my campaign fund was so small I was afraid I couldn't pay off the help at headquarters."

MacSwiney is Much Weaker 46th Day

(United Press)

London, Sept. 27.—As Lord Mayor MacSwiney, weaker than any time heretofore, began his forty-sixth day of fasting in Brixton prison today, police claimed to have nipped a plot for a series of demonstrations in his behalf.

Kelly Symington, arrested near Brixton prison, was to be arraigned today on charges of possessing weapons and seditious literature.

The guard about Brixton prison has been augmented against possible outbreaks by MacSwiney supporters.

Officials said MacSwiney slept well before midnight but was restless early this morning.

Valuable to Science.

The telescope gives enlarged views of distant objects, the microscope shows only what is almost in contact with its lens, and by giving a means of making intermediate observations the modifications of the Davon microscope have proven a boon to the naturalist. With great depth of focus and a large field of view, the short focus type, for example, has a working distance of 10 to 18 inches, and magnifies 15 to 38 diameters. An adjustable rubber-tipped rod serves as a rest to support the instrument at the desired height for studying such objects as insects, plants and rocks.

TALK OF WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS MAY ERECT TOWER AND CARILLON.

NEXT CONVENTION TO DECIDE

Washington Would Be the Location and the Building Might House Relics From the Battlefields of France and Belgium.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington.—The general federation of women's clubs, which has a membership of some two million, will at its next convention decide whether or not it will undertake to erect a tower and carillon here at the capital of the country as a national peace monument to the soldiers, sailors and nurses of the world war. The proposal that the membership of the federation undertake to build this memorial was made the other day at a meeting of the board of directors of the federation held here. An estimate of the cost of the memorial was submitted to the board for its guidance. It showed that 54 bells of the carillon would probably cost $150,000, and their installation probably $50,000, while the cost of the tower would be anywhere from $300,000 to $1,000,000, according to the size.

It is the thought of the women who would like to see the federation undertake this project that the tower building could be used as a training school for master carillon players and could also be made a housing place for relics from the battlefields of France and Belgium. Letters from both Governor Cox and Senator Harding were submitted to the meeting of the directors of the federation advocating that a memorial of this sort be erected here.

Not Easy to Get Funds.

The national capital, it is reasonable to assume, will always be the memorial center of the United States. Congress has always been backward about appropriating money for memorials, and efforts to raise funds for this purpose through private subscriptions have not as a rule been successful. Two great memorials here are, of course, the Washington monument and the Lincoln memorial. The construction of the monument proved to be a heavy task. It will be recalled that one section of it was built and stood unfinished for many years waiting on congress to provide the money for its completion. The Lincoln memorial has fared better. Congress took hold of the project with a will and has supplied ample money with which to keep the work going, with the exception that during the world war work was suspended. This building is now practically finished and good progress is being made with the interior decorations. The statue of Lincoln, which is to be the principal interior attraction, will be completed and installed within the next year, it is believed. Meantime the work of beautifying the surrounding grounds in Potomac park is under way.

The building occupied by the American Red Cross, commonly known as the Red Cross building, is a memorial to the soldiers who fought in the United States wars prior to the world war. The money with which it was built was raised by private subscription and was collected for the most part by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, who for many years was secretary of the Red Cross and recently was appointed a member of the board of commissioners for the District of Columbia. She interested some men of large wealth in the memorial project, and really performed a very remarkable task in getting sufficient money with which to buy an entire square of ground and with which to erect the world war plan to erect a memorial convention hall was set on foot, and the public was circularized, but that project has apparently fallen through. No powerful organization got in behind it and it has been demonstrated that such an undertaking cannot go forward without the proper support.

Many Small Memorials.

The national capital is dotted with small memorials—memorials to individuals, mostly men who served with distinction in the army or navy—but these are not the sort of memorials, it seems, in which the people of the country as a whole are greatly interested. The truth is, as many men of artistic taste have pointed out, most of the statues that stand about the national capital are a disgrace to art. It has been suggested a good many times that most of them should be sent to the scrap heap, but this will probably never be done. Congress was primarily to blame for this indiscriminate buying of poor statues to represent men who deserved better recognition. For a great many years the legislative body appropriated money for this purpose indiscriminately.

Fortunately within recent years there has been a federal fine arts commission which has taken this matter in hand and has succeeded in getting the ear of congress. As a result congress no longer appropriates money for the buying of statues or for the erection of memorials here without consulting the fine arts commission. The cases in recent years in which congress has declined to accept the advice of the commission have been few.

HAVE TO WAIT TO UNLOAD

Shipping Congestion at London Docks Said to Be of an Extraordinary Character.

A writer to the London Times describes the Victoria and Albert docks at Tilbury as being "crowded to their fullest capacity with big ships," many of which "look absolutely dead for the simple reason that they can not be unloaded because there is nowhere to put their cargoes." Of ships carrying Australian meat it is said to be "a common thing to wait anything up to a month for a berth and to be another month tied up against the wharf, unloading and reloading." Inefficiency of labor is in a large degree responsible, for the average discharging output per shift of 13 men in a nine-hour day has been reduced from 100 to 63 tons. The cause is partly the loss of many good men in the war, partly loading on the job to make work for as many men as possible. Congestion of the ports is attributed to state control over essential imports, to state control over railroads, and to reduction of the hours of labor. By these means the carrying power of ships has been reduced at least 30 per cent below pre-war standards.

Real Neighborliness.

An interesting experiment in neighborliness has been carried on for nearly a year in a part of Toledo which is populated almost exclusively by Polish immigrants and their descendants. The Polish Business Men's club of the district conceived the idea that the needy Polish families in the community should be taken care of in a neighborly way, rather than by charity organizations. The latter were requested not to extend aid in the district, but to notify the club, so that it might meet all emergencies. This is not done from the club treasury, however. An investigation is made to determine whether the need is for money, supplies or work, and the other residents of the block, including the tradesmen, are then informed that their neighbors need their assistance, which, the club reports, is always forthcoming.
